

Colegio Del Futuro.
Professor Willy Bac.
English.

Cuarto Bachillerato "A".
Fourth Unit, Lesson 10.
Angela Natareno.

Script.

Once upon a time, there was a young man who was training to be a warrior. The tests were going to take place very soon and he wanted to be prepared.

However, he felt very afraid and believed that he was not capable of being like others. He believed that everyone was better than him because they had better swords, better armor, and better shields. And he thought that he wasn't going to be accepted on the team.

When he was on his way to the tests, he saw something shining among the bushes, it was a lamp that had a message on it, when he rubbed the lamp, between shine and dust, a genie came out of it.

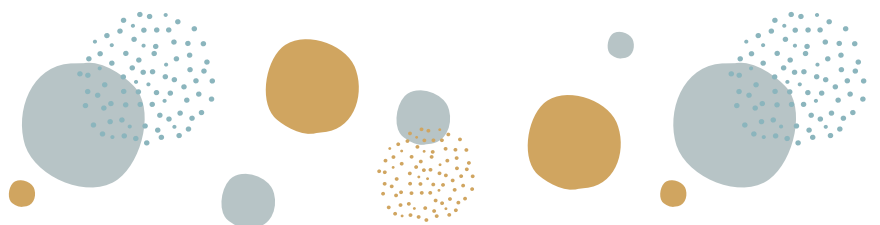

Astonished, the young man exclaimed: who are you?

I am the genie of the lamp, and today is your lucky day my friend, since, to free me, I will fulfill three wishes for you, the genie told him.

The young man remembered all the stories and tales about a magic lamp that had a genie that granted wishes, so he did not hesitate to ask the genie for what he wanted at that moment.

He asked the genie to take him immediately to the place of testing, and the genie fulfilled his wish, since in less than a second they arrived at the place.

And as his third and last wish he asked the genie for a shining armor, and his wish came true.

When the tests were about to begin, the young man saw the other warriors and said:

I will never be like them, I will never be a warrior.

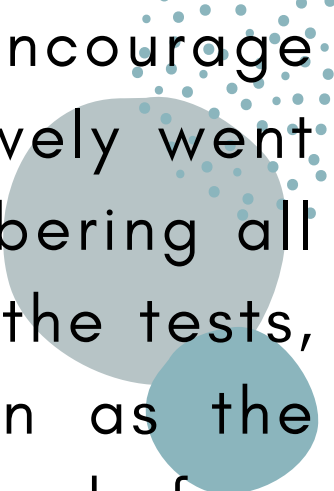

The worried genie asked him why he thought that.

And the young man replied that he thought that if he had shiny armor, a nice sword and a shiny shield he would feel capable of doing the tests, but none of that worked, he felt incapable of achieving it.

The genie told him that things were not what made him brave and capable of doing something, but that it was his confidence and effort that would help him become a warrior. He told him to have confidence in himself and that he would achieve everything.

The genius managed to encourage the young man, and he bravely went to perform his tests, remembering all his training. At the end of the tests, the young man was chosen as the new apprentice warrior, and from then on he understood that it was not the objects that made him brave, but rather his self-confidence.

A decorative graphic consisting of two overlapping circles, one light blue and one darker blue, with a cluster of small blue dots to their right.