

The Unexpected Friendship

On a sunny morning, a butterfly named Andrea was trying to move some branches that were too heavy for her. She was straining with all her might, but couldn't get them to budge. An ant, named Tom, came up and watched her for a moment.

"Miss, do you need help?" Tom asked in his small voice.

Andrea looked down at him and let out a nervous laugh. "You? How are you going to help me? You are so small, you couldn't even lift the smallest of these branches."

Tom straightened up with pride. "Size doesn't matter when someone needs help. If a lady is in trouble, I will find a way to help her, no matter how small I am." And with that promise, the ant mobilized his entire group. Working together, they managed to move the branches in a matter of seconds.

Andrea was astonished. "You are right," she said. "Together, we are stronger."